The revised nomenclature 'hydrogenated groundnut or cottonseed oil" for vanaspati or vegetable products is suggested by the Government of India not to leave any doubt in the public mind as regards the fact that the product they are buying is oil in hydrogenated form and not ghee in any form what so ever. Section 17A of the Bombay Prevention of Adulteration Act refers to fatty or oily substances and provides that no place can be used for the manufacture or preparation of such substances for trade or wholesale sale without a licence from the local authority. Section 17E(2) refers t fatty or oily vegetable substance and provides that no fats or oil of any animal shall be kept where such substance is manufactured. Section 17A or 17E does not contain the words held objectionable by the Government of India. On the other hand the expressions "fatty or oily substance" or fatty or oily vegetables substances" are intended to include other susbtances besides vanaspati or vegetables products. Moreover section 17A or 17E in which the expressions occur would not be used to further the mischief which the Government of India desire to prevent. No amendment of the Bombay Prevention of Adulteration Act is therefore required. The rules and the licence forms in which the objectionable words occur require amendment.
